IRVIN BLOCK OF FRANKFORT DIES IN HOSPITAL

The Frankfort community as well as surrounding territory was shocked to hear of the rather sudden death of Irvin Block aged 35, Standard Oil Company representative at Frankfort since 1936.

Mr. Block was the son of Wm. and Louise Block. He was born in Frankfort July 11, 1904, and spent his entire life in this community.

Upon the death of his father in 1919 he managed his father's estate, and in 1936 was appointed local representative of the Standard Oil Company, a position he filled up to the time of his death.

Mr. Block was of a very genial nature, readily made and retained friends. Through his connection with the Standard Oil Co., he covered a large field and became widely known. He had not complained of any illness, and when he was stricken violently ill on December 30, he was rushed to the Silver Cross hospital in Joliet. Upon examination it was found he was suffering from ulcers of the bowels. He was given five blood transfusions, but this failed to halt the ravages of the malady and he died Sunday noon at 12:05 o'clock.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Wm. Block; one sister, Mabel; and his fiancée, Miss Florence Walsh, Joliet.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the St. Peter's Evangelical church in Frankfort. The last rites were attended by an exceptionally large throng filling the church to capacity. The services were conducted by Rev. G. S. Gerhold. Burial was made in the Pleasant Hill cemetery at Frankfort.

Airplane Crash Victim Dies

Private funeral services for Emil Hampel, Jr., of Worth, were held last Tuesday from the funeral home at 13050 Greenwood ave. Rev. Paul T. Saunders of the Community Center Foundation, Palos Park, officiated. Burial was in the Hazel-green cemetery in Worth.

Hampel was seriously injured in an airplane crash in Markham three weeks ago but his injuries were not considered grave. He was taken to the Ingalls Memorial hospital, in Harvey, but later moved to the Little Company of Mary hospital in Evergreen Park.

Pneumonia set in and Hampel died Thursday morning last week. Physicians said injuries sustained in the accident weakened him so that his resistance was too low.

Hampel was a graduate of Community High school and a student at Thornton Junior college. Hampel had 80 hours flying time from the Harlem airport.

New Lenox Ins. Co. Elects Officers

The 43rd annual meeting of the New Lenox Mutual Fire Insurance company was held at the New Lenox bank Tuesday. Officers were elected as follows:

Charles T. Cooper, president; E. J. McLaughlin, vice president; Ernest Oram, treasurer; Glen Sproat, secretary.

Directors: H. B. Reed, Harlow Gougar, Healey Alexander, James McGrath, Louis Eberhardt, Ernest Oram, Charles Cooper, E. J. McLaughlin, and G. W. Adelman.

Wm. Nagel Heads Green Garden F Men

The Green Garden F men met at the Green Garden town hall Friday night and elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

President, Wm. Nagel; Vice President, Wm. H. Stassen; Secretary, George F. Bobzin; Treasurer, Walter P. Jacobs; Program Chairman, Emil Deist.

The F men also voted to hold regular monthly meetings every second Friday night in the month in the Green Garden town hall. The Green Garden chapter has 48 members enrolled.

Chimney Sparks Cause of Fire

Sparks from a chimney on the Joe Hayden residence in Mokena set fire Saturday afternoon to a pile of dry shingles and leaves piled up along the west side of the building. The dry shingles quickly ignited and the fire had started burning a hole in the wall when Mrs. Hayden, who was home alone, noticed smoke coming into the house and upon investigation discovered the fire. The fire department was summoned and the blaze was quickly extinguished. The damage was small.

Alma Bormet And Jerome Daughtery of Missouri Married

Miss Alma Bormet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Konrad Bormet, became the bride of Jerome Daughtery formerly of Richwood, Mo., December 31, at 3 o'clock, in the Trinity Lutheran church, with Rev. Martin Frick officiating. Miss Theresa Saltzbrener, Oak Park, close friend of the bride, and Herman Bormet, brother of the bride, attended the couple. The bride wore blue with gray accessories, a corsage of chrysanthemums and sweet peas. Miss Saltzbrener wore dusky pink and blue accessories.

Dinner was served to the immediate family at the home of the bride's parents. This date also marked the forty-second anniversary of the bride's parents.

Charles Ruppert Former Supt. of Rock Island Dies

Charles L. Ruppert, who served as superintendent of the Rock Island railroad of the Illinois division for quite a number of years, died of a heart attack Friday night at his home in Rock Island, Ill. He was 72 years old.

Surviving are his widow and two sons, Roy M. Ruppert, Tinley Park, and Max K. Ruppert, New York City.

Mr. Ruppert was widely known among officers and employees of the Rock Island Lines, which he had served for 33 years before retiring on July 1, 1936. His boyhood was spent in Plymouth, Michigan, and he began his railroad career as a telegraph operator in Dodge City, Kansas, in 1903.

Mrs. Robert Lynch Dies In Moline

Word has been received in Mokena that Mrs. Robert Lynch died in Moline, Illinois, November 10. She is survived by her husband and two daughters.

Mr. Lynch is a son of the late Dr. Lynch, and resided in Mokena quite a number of years ago.

Find Frozen Body of Week Old Baby

Palos Heights has a murder mystery. Last Saturday three boys in search of a lost dog found the frozen body of a week-old baby girl at 121st and 73rd in Palos Heights. They reported the find to the Blue Island state highway police. The police have started a search of infant finger print files in hospitals of the Chicago area in an effort to locate the parents.

Patrolman Joseph Fitzgerald of the highway police said the stomach and legs of the child's body seemed to be blistered as if from burns. Police theorized the body had been thrown from an auto after the child had died.

The boys who found the body are Robert Martin, 17, of 12143 S. 73rd Ct., Palos Park; and his brother, Richard, 14; and Joseph Sinise, 20, 21144 Grove, Blue Island. The body was taken to the Adler & Funk funeral home in Oak Forest.

Catholic Club To Hold Card Party

Mokena Bank Re-elects Officers

The annual stockholders meeting of the Mokena State bank was held Wednesday morning. The reports show the bank had a successful year and is in excellent condition.

The following officers were re-elected:

President, Mrs. Rose Moriarty; Vice-President, Edward Martie; Cashier, Otto A. Bartels; Asst. Cashier, Everett Cooper; Bookkeeper, Lydia Baudry.

The Last Call

Harry Balchowsky, of Frankfort who has been conducting special weekly awards at his store every Saturday night for the past four years, announces that he will hold his last award this coming Saturday, January 13. These awards have been very successful, but Mr. Balchowsky has decided to discontinue them for the time being. If there should be a demand for the continuation the rewards may be resumed.

Four Martins Will Furnish Music at Lake-Cook Supply Co. Stockholders Meeting Jan. 18

The Board of Directors have announced that the 12th Annual Meeting of the stockholders of the Lake-Cook Farm Supply Company will be held at the Masonic Temple at Des Plaines, Illinois, at 10 a. m., on Thursday, January 18, 1940.

This meeting will be of unusual interest to the farmers of Lake and Cook counties in that one of the largest dividends in the history of the Company has been declared, approximately $40,000. Besides this, interesting reports of the progress of the Company will be made by the officers. These reports will be climaxed by the main speaker of the day, Mr. Donald Kirkpatrick, who legal advisor of the American Farm Bureau Federation, as well as the Illinois Agricultural Association.

Impressive Services Mark Corner Stone Laying of Church

Special corner stone laying services were held by the Tinley Park Methodist church in the Tinley Park school auditorium Sunday afternoon. The services opened at three o'clock with the following program:

Call to Worship; Hymn; Prayer; Responsive reading; New Testament reading; Prayer Hymn; Address by Dr. Pierce; Offering; Sealing of box, under the direction of Sebastian Andres; Prayer of Consecration; Processional to the new church with stone being carried by members of the League.

Dr. Pierce, the District Superintendent of the Methodist church, delivered the address at the close of which a local history making event took place when Rev. L. E. Weinreich, pastor of the Tinley Park Methodist church, surrounded by the following members of the building committee and Dr. Pierce, witnessed the sealing of the copper box by Sebastian Andres and his assistant, Albert Schuldt.

The building committee is comprised of John Swisher, chairman, Wm. Shellhase, Jr., Percy Jochum, A. E. Devoil, and Conrad Andres.

The following objects were placed in the copper box which was sealed into place in the stone:

Copy of the New Testament. Copy of Methodist Discipline. Conference minutes. Advocate. Epworth Herald. Christian Apologist. Ladies Aid Year Book. History of the German and English M. E. churches of Tinley Park, now merged in one congregation. List of pastors of both churches. Copy of the Tinley Park Times of January 5, 1940. Program of morning service of January 7. Program of corner stone laying service. List of Official Board members. List of Building Committee. List of active members. Photostat copy of merger minutes. Photos including pictures of young people's work. A nail from the old German Methodist church building which was destroyed by fire caused by a lightning bolt several years ago. A penny bearing the date of 1858, which was the year in which plans were formulated for the establishment of a Methodist church in the Tinley Park territory. A penny of 1939, the year in which the new church building was begun.

Sebastian Andres, assisted by Albert Schuldt, sealed the copper box with an electric soldering iron. The box was placed in the corner stone which bears the inscription "Tinley Park Methodist Church 1939-40."

At the conclusion of the service the stone, which had been placed on a stretcher-like device, was carried from the school to the new church site by members of the League of the Methodist church.

The scene at the new edifice was impressive in its winter setting. A fairly heavy snow fall covered the ground during the morning and it was late afternoon, just at the point of dusk, with a gentle snow falling, that the corner stone was placed in the front wall of the church.

The service was concluded with the benediction being pronounced by Dr. Pierce, the District Superintendent.

According to present plans the new edifice will be completed so that the opening service can be held therein sometime in June.

The famous Lake-Cook Farm Supply Company free lunch is on the docket again this year. This lunch is being prepared by cooks of the Company and assuring you of good food and plenty of it.

Music will be furnished by the "Four Martins." The Martin children, brother and sister musicians, are a proven appealing group, having five years stage experience, in more than 300 appearances in fairs, theatres, meetings, schools, etc. Each have musical training and are able to entertain with a variety of instruments, vocal solos, harmony, yodels, and comedy. They furnish good, clean entertainment and have pleased audiences wherever they have appeared.

Dietrich Rieches of Frankfort Dies In Chicago Heights

Dietrich Rieches, who with his brother Fred, has been living on a farm near Frankfort for many years died in the St. James hospital in Chicago Heights January 8.

He was born in Germany in 1870 and came to this country as a young man. He is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Hibbing, Eagle Lake, Wis., Mrs. Mary Schumaker, Buckley, Ill., five brothers, William of Ash Grove, Ill., Henry of Flossmoor, John of Buckley, Herman of Milford, Ill., and Fred of Frankfort.

Funeral services were held on Thursday afternoon from the Spindler & Koelling Funeral Home in Chicago Heights with Rev. Henry Senne of the St. John Evangelical and Reformed church of Chicago Heights officiating.

Frankfort Church Council Reorganized

The church council met Monday night and re-organized. The following officers were elected:

Arthur Reese, president; Wm. Bettenhausen, vice president; Wallace Weichbrodt, recording secretary; Albert Krusemark, Jr., financial secretary; Le Roy Mager, treasurer; Christ Hohenstein, Albert Krusemark, Jr., Le Roy Mager, Conrad Oetter, Gilbert Voss, trustees. Philip Triem, Harold Scheer, Herbert Schoop, Harold Ebert, Wallace Weichbrodt, deacons.

The church council meets the first Friday evening of each month. A committee was appointed for the annual officers and workers banquet on Wednesday, January 31.

Tractor Replaces Old Dobbin In Pulling Sleigh

The famous old winter song which immortalized old dobbin and the sleigh in the song "Jingle Bells" with the words "O what fun it is to ride in a one horse open sleigh" has been given a more modern version this winter in Tinley Park.

With the recent snow fall the young folks of the High League and Junior League of the Tinley Park Methodist church planned for a series of bob sleigh rides, but instead of hitching up a team of horses, Arthur Brandau hooked his rubber tired tractor to the sleigh and gave the young folks a faster ride than old dobbin could give them. As the paved highways have been cleaned of all snow, only the side and country roads can be used for sleigh rides.

The innovation of using a tractor instead of horses is quite a novel one, and a sleigh filled to utmost capacity is hauled with apparent ease by the tractor.

Go To Florida

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence E. Beagley and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Cooper, Orland Park, left Thursday morning on a trip to Florida, where they intend spending several weeks.

Truck Burns on 143rd Near Orland

Last Friday night, with the thermometer at 4 below zero, Fire Chief John Hellenhouse, of the Orland Park Fire department, received a call from the Forty and Eight Convalescent Camp on 143rd Street, saying an explosion had been heard and a fire was seen soon after that looked as though the blaze was at the Walter Smith home.

The firemen quickly responded, but on arrival found that it was not the Smith home but a big truck which was afire. A front tire had blown out, which accounted for the explosion report. The truck was operated with a Diesel motor. In some manner the fuel oil became ignited, and fanned by a stiff west wind, swept through the truck and trailer, both of which were empty. Everything inflammable on the truck, including the tires, burned. Chemicals were used to fight the fire but took no effect on the oil. The truck was owned by a private operator from Chicago and was on the way to Joliet to pick up a load. No one was hurt.

Wm. Logan, aged 92, the oldest resident in Frankfort, died in his home Wednesday night. He had been ill only three weeks.

Mr. Logan was born near Frankfort January 20, 1848, and lived here all his life. He followed the machinists trade and handled farm machinery and wind mills for many years and up until the last few weeks he was actively engaged in his machine shop. He had a wonderful memory and keen mind up to the very last. He had never been seriously ill during all his many years.

His wife, Adele nee Quackenbush, died in 1924.

Surviving are two sons, Frank Chicago Heights; Lyle, Homewood; two daughters, Mrs. A. C. (Clari-bell) Logan, Joliet; and Mrs. A. J. (Harriett) Knater, Frankfort.

Funeral services will be held at the late home Saturday afternoon, January 13, at 2 p. m., with Rev. Rudolph Malek of the Frankfort Methodist church officiating. There will be no church service. Burial will be in Pleasant Hill cemetery.

Railroad Officials At 25th Wedding Celebration

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Lenhardt of Chicago Heights, former Frankfort residents, celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary in the Frankfort school gym, January 9th. Dancing formed the entertainment. The honored couple's sons, Howard and Harold sponsored the celebration. Howard has been a member of the Bob Phillips orchestra of Chicago for the past three years and they supplied the music.

Mr. Lenhardt is section foreman on the E. J. & E. railroad in Chicago Heights and officials of the road were present. Guests present were from Chicago, Joliet, Gary, Hobart, New Lenox, Chicago Heights and neighboring towns. The couple received many gifts including a chest of silverware from their sons. Their many friends wish them many more happy anniversaries.

Relief Clients Must Report Income From Cars or Trucks

A notice has been served on Bremen township relief clients that all direct relief clients who own cars or trucks must turn in their car keys and identification cards unless income from use of car or truck is reported.

Robert Cure Dies Following Stroke

John Cure died on Wednesday, January 3, at his home in Blue Island. He suffered a stroke at noon and died about six o'clock the same day.

Mr. Cure was born on a farm west of Blue Island, February 5, 1868. In 1889 he was united in marriage to Lena Schultz. They lived on a farm in Orland township for over 35 years. Since leaving the farm they have resided at their present home in Blue Island.

One year ago, February 28, they celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. Mr. Cure leaves to mourn his loss his wife, Lena; one son, Robert; five daughters, Rose Ebert, Carrie Madlung, Lillie Jones, Pearl Bauer, Blue Island; Frances Miller, Palos Park; also 17 grandchildren and 3 great grandchildren; two sisters, Ann and Mary; and three brothers, Frank, Peter, and Michael.

Funeral services were held Saturday from St. Benedict's church, and burial was in St. Benedict's cemetery, Blue Island.

Tinley R. N. A. Will Entertain Hubbies Jan. 23rd

Tuesday night the Tinley Park Royal Neighbors held their regular and social meeting and had a good attendance. It was decided at this meeting to invite all the husbands and boy friends of the members to attend the installation of newly elected officers of the Camp on Tuesday night, January 23.

Members of the committees in charge say "Get out your best bib and tucker, come with your best girl and trip the light fantastic. Prepare yourself for a good time and plenty of food for the inner man." The committees promise that you won't be sorry you came.

"ZANY" NO MORE

Martin Dies Grows in U. S. Esteem As 'Ism' Investigation Bears Fruit

By HOWARD LANCASTER

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WASHINGTON.—"The only thing that counts in these investigations is what gets into the papers."

That was Martin Dies' credo the moment he opened the first hearing before his congressional committee investigating un-American activities and propaganda.

Within a few weeks most of the nation was laughing at him. Strip-Teaser Gypsy Rose Lee offered to bare all for the committee, and little Shirley Temple was labeled a Communist decoy by one of Mr. Dies' witnesses.

It seems strange, therefore, that much of America is laughing on the other side of its face today. There are still plenty of people who think the committee's early investigations were a farce (and Dies admits he got a few crackpot witnesses), but a peculiar combination of circumstances has placed the un-Americanism committee front and center on the Washington stage.

This month, having submitted a report on its second year's investigation, the committee is asking congress for a new appropriation. Here's why it happened:

First, you have the correct combination of men and times. Dies is the 38-year-old Texan with heavy hands and yellow hair whose sole claim to fame after seven lean years in congress was his penchant for speech-making and a hatred for "isms."

Two other men instrumental in this affair were New York's Nazi-hating Rep. Samuel Dickstein and Vice President Jack Garner. Dickstein used to have a habit of baiting Hitler from the house floor and reading long lists of citizens whom he accused of being Nazis. His fellow Jews thought he was doing the race more harm than good, and the house didn't like to be embarrassed. So the rules committee (of which Dies was a member) decided to silence Dickstein by stealing his thunder.

Jack Garner's place in this affair is mysterious, but possibly very important. Being a fellow Texan and a friend of Dies, he might have seen an opportunity for poking the red-hot spotlight of publicity into left-wing elements of the New Deal, thus paving the way for his own candidacy in 1940.

By 1938 the shirt crowd—black shirts, brown shirts, silver shirts, etc.—were getting to be a dirty shirt crowd. When Martin Dies read about Bundsfuehrer Fritz Kuhn, his shirts and his camps, his blue eyes saw red.

ORATOR—Until he started red-baiting, Martin Dies' only claim to fame was presidency of the "Demagogues" club, whose tin badge is awarded only to those congressmen who get particularly windy.

Another reason was the LaFollette civil liberties committee, which had been accusing industrialists of employing spies to prevent their employees from organizing. To provide an offsetting influence, many congressmen thought somebody should investigate subversive influences.

Finally, there was the Dies mania for publicity. It's rumored that he called off an important hearing last autumn because the world series was monopolizing the headlines. And he's not ashamed to admit it: "The good that this committee does depends on how many people read the testimony in newspapers. Who in the world is going to bother about the official record?"

Paying $5 a day and traveling expenses for each witness eats up a $25,000 appropriation like a cat licks up milk. Which is one reason the committee's first year was a perfect model of what congressional investigations shouldn't be. Dies had no counsel, no co-operation from the administration and no reason to expect any.

But he did get publicity, and last year an alarmed citizenry demanded that these un-American upstarts be ferreted out and shot at sunrise. Result: A $100,000 appropriation.

Dies couldn't fight a world series but he used a much bigger competitive news story as a stepladder to fame. That story was World War II. The Communist-Nazi pact last August gave him new stature, for it proved the swastikas were blood brothers to the hammers-and-sickles.

Since the war started America has tried to lock its gates against foreign propagandists, and has begun wondering if Martin Dies isn't something of a prophet. Suddenly the nation has realized that—despite his blustering and apparently misdirected efforts—this red-baiter has actually hung quite a few scalps outside his wigwag.

In 1938 he pointed the committee's guns westward from Washington and helped mow down 45 Democratic congressmen. Dies charged that Frank Murphy failed to carry out his gubernatorial duties in the Flint sit-down strike back in 1937, and the resultant rumpus contributed to Murphy's defeat when he sought re-election.

Even the administration has started to co-operate. President Roosevelt called it "sordid procedure" when the committee published names of 565 government employees on the mailing list of the American League for Peace and Democracy, the inference being that these people were Communists. But a few days later Dies' charges against Communist Earl Browder took shape in a federal indictment. Bundsfuehrer Fritz Kuhn, limelighted by the committee, was sent to Sing Sing by New York District Attorney Tom Dewey.

The case of Harry Bridges, radical west coast labor leader, was shouted from the housetops until Madame Secretary Perkins agreed to a hearing on charges that Bridges was an undesirable alien. A decision is now pending.

Glaring at labor, Martin Dies accused the unions of harboring foreign agents. He now claims one of the largest unions is quietly purging its ranks. He was partially responsible for the recent house investigation of the National Labor Relations board, in which unsavory reports were aired.

Dies put a stop to the WPA federal theater project, which he said was alive with Communists. He also talked congress into halving the appropriation of Senator LaFollette's civil liberties committee, which is working the other side of the "ism" street.

Even his most severe critics now admit Martin Dies is coming of age, though they still notice a lot of rough edges that need polishing. Oblivious to criticism, Dies has made his report to congress and started campaigning for more funds.

Here's his view of it: He's proved conclusively the existence of "isms" in the United States. Therefore the next logical step is to get at the cause of these radical movements. To this end he would ask congress for funds to interview share-croppers, laborers, sailors, dispossessed farmers, bootblacks and all other unhappy Americans who come within ear shot.

It would be the biggest show on earth, with Martin Dies as ring-master.

Senator Wheeler seen bidding for Roosevelt support if F. D. R. doesn't want third term . . . South demands way to ship cotton to England . . . Indiana's state pride makes Republicans favor McNutt's candidacy.

WASHINGTON.—Senator Burton K. Wheeler's statement that no candidate could win the Democratic nomination without the approval of President Roosevelt, or at least that the nomination would be worthless without active support for the candidate by F. D. R., is regarded by most political observers here as a final bid by the Montana statesman for Roosevelt's support in the eventuality that the President does not seek renomination.

The point is that virtually all observers agree that President Roosevelt would never lift a finger to help Burt Wheeler get the Democratic nomination, even assuming that the President did not want the nomination himself. Wheeler had been waving olive branches at the White House for some time, and the President has been sending for him a great deal, thus giving the impression that the feud between the two had been healed.

But no one outside the Wheeler entourage has taken this peace-making very seriously. It is pointed out that the President has never forgiven any one who proved his enemy on any important issue, and the thought is that the defeat the White House took on the Supreme court packing bill left too many bitter scars for any olive-branch waving to overcome it.

The theory is that the President may smile at Wheeler, and use him, on the notion that there is no use biting off one's nose to spite one's face, but that the cordiality is all on the surface.

Wheeler, however, has apparently taken the President's constant consultations with him during the last session of congress at their face value, assuming, of course, that the outside gossip is right about the President's really not having forgiven him.

Roosevelt Strongly Opposed To Nomination of Garner

There is also very general agreement that the President would never stand for the nomination of John Nance Garner. The President believes that Garner is utterly out of sympathy with many of the New Deal policies.

Most of the left wingers around the White House, the men who have the most ready access to the President, feel sure that they would not have positions very long after Garner's inauguration. So they take pains to keep the home fires burning so far as the President's distrust of his "second in command" is concerned.

Incidentally these left wingers have had no hesitancy in private conversations with other officials, and with outsiders as well, in expressing their conviction that the President would never approve Garner's nomination. While they contend that it would be impossible to nominate Garner without Roosevelt's sanction, when pressed as to what the President would do if Garner should be nominated, they insist he would "take a walk."

Congress May Take Hand In Transfer of Ship Flags

There may be an entirely different picture of this business of transferring United States lines ships to the flag of Panama by the time congress convenes. The first obvious indignation was at the obvious duplicity—as critics saw it—of the scheme. Especially starting to put it through after congress had gone home, satisfied that it had passed a law which would keep the United States out of a certain type of danger which might involve this country in the war.

It is perfectly true that the chief reasons actuating President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull in approving the idea was to enable American industry to market its wares abroad.

But the big pressure is not coming from the airplane manufacturers, or the toolmakers, or even the oil men. They know that the belligerents will find some way of getting enough ships over here to bring those particular products. The real outcry is coming from the cotton men.

Cotton has been piling up in New Orleans, for instance, because the ships that normally would be carrying it to England have been barred from that trade by the "cash and carry" provisions of the neutrality act. Now, of course, eventually Britain must have that cotton. She would have to provide ships for it some way or other. But this is not as clear to the cotton factors, and even the cotton farmers, as it is to the makers of airplanes.

So the cotton people have already begun bombarding Washington with demands that the government do something to get this cotton moved.

South Demands Way Be Found To Ship Cotton to England

A little thing like the neutrality act provision barring United States ships from trading with the belligerents—or going into war zones near them—bothers the cotton folks no more than the law of supply and demand did last year, or the year before that.

They have been educated by their politicians for years to believe that by voting for the right people at primary time, they could be sure to have men in Washington who would crack down on the wicked individuals in New York, or elsewhere, who were keeping the price of cotton down. Thus—though naturally their mode of correction had not been notably successful until Triple A benefits began to pour in—they have come to look to Washington for everything. And they are looking right now.

"Get this cotton to England," they demand.

Some of the people who were shouting loudest of all to keep the arms embargo on—it was "murder to sell munitions to belligerents"—are now just as vociferous in their demands that the United States government must get around this "cash and carry" thing somehow, and get that cotton abroad.

It was always this way. When Britain was interfering with cotton shipments to Holland—on the theory that the cotton was really going to Germany, back in 1915—much of the cotton country wanted to break off diplomatic relations with England.

All of which is just human nature, and politics. But look out for repercussions. A lot of senators who are openly sneering now at the idea of hoisting the Panamanian flag over United States line ships will be singing a very different tune in January. Especially Southern senators.

The White House knows all about this, and is much less concerned about the criticism of the Panama deal than one might think. Some way will be found. That cotton MUST get to England—to please New Orleans if not Manchester.

Indiana's State Pride Makes Republicans Favor McNutt

There may be no way of proving it, but certain neutral observers who have been watching the political mill for many years believe that Indiana has more state pride than any other subdivision of these United States.

What makes this of interest right now is the general talk about Paul V. McNutt, former governor of Indiana and the favorite son of the Democratic Hoosiers for President next year. One might well expect the Indiana Democrats to speak well of McNutt. After all he is still the head of the Democratic organization there, and it is about as solid and efficient an organization as there is in the country. So an Indiana Democrat speaking unkindly of McNutt's presidential qualifications had better take care who hears him. It might interfere with his own political future.

But the Indiana Republicans also speak well of McNutt. Not that they actually want to see him in the White House. They want a Republican, naturally, but if there has to be a Democrat they would like it to be McNutt, and even if a Republican is going to win the presidency they would like to see McNutt have the honor of the Democratic nomination.

Moreover, they will talk at length, will these Indiana Republicans, of the charm of the man, his good looks, his political appeal, and his oratorical ability. Not to mention his political astuteness, which they all profess to admire, some of them even to the extent of saying he is the one man in the country who is probably a better politician even than Franklin D. Roosevelt!

McNutt's Nomination Would Help All Local Candidates

This being true, the outlanders go on, it would seem obvious that McNutt's candidacy for the presidency, assuming he gets the nomination, would help every local Democratic candidate for office in Indiana, and by the same token hurt every local Republican candidate.

That is the way the favorite son business is viewed in other states, and it would seem to any one not born and raised in Indiana that the more state pride there is in Indiana, the more true this effect on the local tickets of nominating a Hoosier for President would be. Actually the favorite son thing has not worked out that way in some other states. In fact in some states it has almost seemed at times as though the voters did not care whether a man from their state was President or not. For instance, when Kansas voted for Roosevelt against its own governor. For instance, the two times that Nebraska cast its electoral vote against William Jennings Bryan. For instance, when West Virginia went for Coolidge against its native son John W. Davis.

But perhaps no one outside the state can understand Indiana or its people. It has always been this way, apparently. No one could get the late John W. Kern or Benjamin F. Shively, when they were in the senate, to say one word against Republicans James E. Watson and Harry S. New, who not only wanted to but eventually did succeed them. (Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions. These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes. If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging back-ache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

"Lord, Autumn, what's come over you?" Florian reproached her. "You need a shaking up. I'll be out for you around eight."

"Will Lin be along?"

"Not on your life—not with me," Florian replied. "She has made other arrangements."

"Of course."

"Bruce is coming in to look after her. We'll make it a nice little four-some when we get together. Any objections?"

"None whatever," she replied lightly. "I'll be ready when you come."

When she mentioned the affair to her father and asked him if he would not like to come along, he drew down one shaggy eyebrow and elevated the other humorously.

"Me? Scarcely," he said. "But buy me a ticket—buy me half a dozen. It's a worthy cause. You run along and enjoy yourself. It'll probably be the last spree for you in this part of the world. Put on your glad rags and show 'em what it means to be a Dean!"

Autumn laughed a little tremulously and kissed the serene and smiling eyebrow. "I'll do that very thing, Da," she told him. "Though you'd cast more glamor on the name than I can, if that's what you want, you old Roman!"

He tweaked her ear, and Autumn ran upstairs to dress.

Florian, turned out flawlessly in evening clothes, was waiting impatiently in the drawing room below. His quick flush as she came down to meet him, the silver web of her evening wrap on her arm, would have been sweet to the light vanity that had been hers in a day gone by. Now she heeded it only with a feeling of faint vexation. Florian came forward and lifted a cool and waxy corsage of white orchids from the small table near the door.

"Permit me, most beautiful!" he said, bowing elaborately from the waist. "And if you tell me you hate orchids, I'll make you eat 'em!"

Autumn laughed and brushed the delicate aristocrats with her finger tips. "Extravagant wretch!" she said, and fixed them to her gown. "They're beautiful, Florian. There! Thank you so much!"

She did, as a matter of fact, detest orchids, and in her imperious days at Aunt Flo's she had never thought twice about spurning them. But that was before this curious possession of pity had come over her.

"You haven't seen father, of course?" she said as they turned to leave.

"I crashed the gates with Hannah's assistance," Florian said. "Is the Laird still peeved about the haystack episode?"

"No," she replied. "He has forgotten that, I think. But he has his bad days."

"Probably feels low about your leaving him so soon again."

"Scarcely that. He may be joining me in the fall."

They had got into Florian's car. "We're going to miss you like the deuce," he said.

"It's something to know I'll be missed, anyway," Autumn murmured.

Florian put out a hand and crushed her fingers within his own, then let them go and grasped the wheel. "Damn it!" he muttered. "If you would only listen to reason—"

The hall in which the dance was being held was packed when they arrived. Japanese lanterns and gay streamers festooned the ballroom and across the bobbing sea of faces came the giddy blare of a jazz orchestra. Autumn looked down from a balcony upon the throng, with heavy-lidded eyes behind which there was a searching glow.

"Some crush, eh?" Florian observed, standing close beside her. "Shall we go down at once and get our shins kicked? Or shall we wait awhile? They're using everything down there from the Ark gallop to the latest wiggle of the rumba."

"Let us look on for a while first," she suggested.

As she spoke, her lashes swept low over her eyes. In the comparative freedom of the outer fringe of dancers, she had seen Linda and Bruce Landor. Above Linda's head, Bruce's eyes moved cautiously along the rim of the balcony, paused for an imponderable instant as they met Autumn's, and moved on in indifference.

"There's Lin and Bruce," Florian said suddenly, "down there near the wall—to the right."

Autumn looked, pretending not to see at once. "I see them now," she said finally.

"You could pick them out of a million," Florian said admiringly. "They make the rest of the crowd look like also-rans. Let's go down and give them a little competition, Autumn."

"So you got here?" It was Hector Cardigan speaking at Autumn's elbow. She turned upon him a radiant smile and extended her hands.

"Hello, darling!" she cried throatily. "How gorgeous you look!" She seized the lapels of his dinner jacket and surveyed him with wide eyes. "Are you going to give me a dance?"

"You flatter me," Hector said in his courtly fashion. "Do you guarantee to bring me safely out of the melee?"

"She brings us all safely back—out of everything," Florian put in. "Are you so afraid?" Autumn asked, as if she had not heard Florian's remark.

"Those young things down there—they terrify me," Hector said.

"And you a soldier!" Autumn bantered.

Hector smiled. "I was younger then than I am now," he said. "And stepping all over one's toes was considered against the rules."

Autumn and Florian laughed, and the three made their way down to the dancing-floor, the men on either side of Autumn, her arms drawn lightly through theirs. They stood chatting for a moment beside a great potted palm, and then Autumn waved back at Hector as Florian swept her away into the dance.

"The next one, Hector, remember," she said over Florian's shoulder. "I'll meet you in the lounge."

Hector nodded, but when she was out of sight he frowned. Bruce Landor had just come off the floor with Linda Parr. They strolled toward him, saluting him from some distance away as they approached. It occurred to the old soldier then that Autumn's wish to dance with him had been merely a ruse. Her real desire was to avoid dancing with Bruce.

"Permit me, most beautiful!"

"Hullo, Hector!" Bruce said warmly as he came face to face with him. Linda, with a nod toward Hector, had been caught up by someone else and was already moving away into the crowd.

"Good evening, Bruce," Hector said with a stern smile. "You seem to be enjoying yourself."

"Immense," Bruce replied with a promptness that brought a slight lift to Hector's eyebrows.

Hector toyed with the ribbon guard of his glasses. "The hospital ought to benefit from this," he remarked. "It's the best crowd I've seen for years."

"Everybody's here," Bruce agreed.

They stood for a moment and watched the dancers swirl past them.

"I think I'll get out of the crowd a bit," Hector said at last. "What would you say to a smoke, my boy?"

"I'd be all for it," Bruce replied. "Let's go to the lounge, then," Hector suggested.

They made their way to a corner of the lounge where there was a measure of privacy and seated themselves in two chairs that made an angle facing the entrance.

"I haven't seen much of you lately," Hector said as he offered Bruce his cigarette case.

"I haven't been out much, except on business," Bruce replied. "I've had a busy summer of it, one way or another."

"Yes, yes, of course. I was sorry to hear about your prize Merinos. There was underhand work in that affair, eh?"

Bruce lit his cigarette and blew a cloud of smoke as he settled back in his chair. "I can't talk about it, Hector," he said. "It makes me want to fight when I even think of it."

"Naturally, naturally," Hector said. "The less you think about it the better, I should say." He smoked a moment in silence, then cleared his throat softly. "I understand you are going to lose your young neighbor soon," he remarked casually.

"You mean Autumn Dean?" Bruce said without a flicker of expression revealed to the shrewd look that Hector turned upon him.

"Yes."

"Lin told me tonight that she plans to go back to England," Bruce said. "Next week, I believe. And you are letting her go?"

Bruce cast a quick glance at the old man. "I'm letting her go? I wasn't aware that I had anything to do with it," he said in an off-hand manner.

Hector smiled slowly as he looked at Bruce, then sighed reminiscently.

ly. "The age of chivalry seems to have passed," he said, shaking his head.

Bruce gazed at his cigarette smoke with narrowed lids. "I don't follow you, Hector," he said. "I can't see what chivalry has to do with it when a girl takes it into her head to run off to Europe."

"Do you know, my boy," Hector replied, after a moment of silence, "I suspect that this younger generation they talk about so much nowadays—I suspect they're a pretty faint-hearted crowd compared with their fathers—or their grandfathers, for example."

"I'm not in a position to question you, Hector," Bruce said. "If your reference to the faint heart has anything to do with the fair lady—"

"Of course it has!" Hector put in. "In my day, if a young man had notions about a young lady, she wouldn't get a chance to run off to England and leave him in the lurch."

Bruce laughed lightly. "Hector," he said, "you're barking up the wrong tree, old boy."

Hector bristled immediately. "I don't bark—" he began, then halted abruptly and got to his feet. "Here comes Autumn herself," he said, his pleasure and annoyance making a curious gnome-like mask of his face.

For an almost imperceptible instant, Autumn paused in her approach to them. Hector saw her quick pallor and put out a hand toward her. Bruce rose and made a slight, formal bow with an ease that was disconcerting to Hector.

After a brief "Good evening!" to Bruce, Autumn turned at once to Hector.

"Our dance, Hector!" she announced. "Or haven't you finished your smoke?"

Hector waived her question and then drew himself up sternly. "You are planning to leave for England next Saturday, I understand," he said to Autumn.

"Next Saturday morning, Hector," she replied.

"I am inviting you two"—he said, and looked aggressively from one to the other—"to dinner at my house next Thursday evening. Will that suit you both?"

There was a silence in which Hector, the spectator, saw the clash of humorously blue eyes and clear, stricken, sea-green eyes. Bruce thrust one hand idly into the pocket of his coat and stood in a lounging attitude, looking pleasantly down at Autumn as he replied.

"Thursday will suit me, Hector."

"Why, certainly, darling," Autumn said breathlessly, turning to Hector. "How sweet of you! Shall we dance now?" She took Hector's arm and led him away.

Bruce watched them go, then smiled as he seated himself.

Poor old Hector, he thought wryly. Making a last gallant effort! And how gamely she had taken it! Came right back at him, her eyes flaming in rage. Oh, well—what the devil! He buried his cigarette angrily in the earth of a potted plant that stood near at hand, then got up and strolled out, the leisurely figure of a young man who had no scar on his spirit.

The evening was no more than half spent when Autumn begged Florian to take her home. She pleaded a headache—from the noise and the heavy air of the place. Florian protested, but finally agreed. They found Linda and together arranged for one last night at the Parr hunting lodge before Autumn would drive up from home and meet them at the lodge. The day was set and the girls kissed each other good night. For once, it seemed, Autumn was more languid than Linda.

Fifty miles southward, and ten more off the straight trail to Kelowna, was the distance that Autumn must go to the Parr hunting lodge. She had left home early to attend to some business in Kamloops and to assure Hector that she would be on hand for his dinner party on the following evening. It was a matter of indifference to her that Florian would be at the lodge, too, but the thought of meeting Linda warmed her heart. It would be difficult to say good-by to her. In her frivolous, unsentimental way Linda had shown her more unconscious sympathy than she could ever guess.

It was barely dusk when Autumn drove her car in through the rustic gate that led to the lodge. She got out promptly and glanced about, anticipating that Linda and Florian would be on the lookout for her. "Hello!" Florian came hurrying toward her from the doorway of the lodge.

He took her gloved hands in a firm grip and stood looking down at her with a strange, inscrutable smile.

"Hello, Florian!" she returned, her voice a little unsteady. "Gosh, I've been driving like a fiend!"

"Go on in," Florian told her and gave her shoulder a little squeeze with his hand from which she shrank with instinctive uneasiness.

He jumped into the car and drove it hurriedly into the garage cabin. Autumn started toward the lodge, but Florian caught up with her and opened the door for her to enter. Within the large room, familiar to her now with its antlered heads projecting from the walls, its bear and cougar skins scattered about the floor, its deep stone fireplace, its properly rustic but comfortable chairs and deep divan, its buffet littered with bottles and glasses which would be an eternal adjunct to any furnishings of the Parrs—there was not another soul but herself and Florian.

Autumn turned upon him. "Where's Lin?" she demanded.

Florian had closed the door. He was leaning against it now, his hands thrust nonchalantly into the pockets of his corduroy jacket. His blond head shone in unruly picturesqueness against the stained light surface of the door. His dark eyes smiled at her, half closed in contemplative pleasure.

"Lin came down with tonsillitis this morning," he told her.

"Why didn't you telephone me, then?"

"We did, but you had already left home."

"Why didn't you have Elinor come along with you?" Autumn demanded, vexed at Florian's manner.

"Lord, Autumn, don't get all worked up over nothing," he replied. "Elinor doesn't go out with me. Besides, isn't it all right this way?"

"You know it isn't—as well as I do," she told him.

He took a step toward her with easy indolence. "Don't be a simp!" he said. "Give me your things."

Autumn looked at him coolly, surveying him hostilely as he regarded her with his smile of assurance.

"Certainly not," she said. "I'm going back home right now. You know I wouldn't have come if I had known you were to be alone here."

She moved toward the door, but Florian grasped the shoulders of her loose automobile coat and pulled it off her.

"Don't be such a fool!" he said.

"Now that you're here, sit down and be pleasant about it. I'm not so old-fashioned as to make any assaults on your virtue, if that's what's on your mind. My God, I had to come up here to tell you, didn't I?"

"Now that you've told me—I can go," Autumn replied.

"You're not going to get out of here till we've had a drink and a bite to eat. After that you may do as you please."

Autumn seated herself and took a cigarette from her case. She lit it and sat without speaking while Florian carried her coat to a closet and hung it up. When he came back he poured a couple of drinks at the buffet, one of which he handed to Au-turn. Then, glass in hand, he stood before her and laughed sardonically.

"So little Autumn was afraid her Florian was going to stage a regular old-time, knock-'em-down-and-drag-'em-out scene, eh?" he observed.

"I wasn't afraid," Autumn told him.

"As a matter of fact, I really should do something about it," he went on. "Come to think of it, you've succeeded in making a fool of me all summer."

"I see," said Autumn. "You'd like to get even. I didn't credit you with being vindictive."

He flushed darkly. Then a pathetically boyish and disappointed look came over his face, so that for a moment, in spite of herself, Autumn felt sorry for him. Perhaps it had been unsporting of her to play with him all summer when she had known from the first how he had felt about her. Florian threw himself into a chair and sat with his hand shading his eyes.

"No," he replied slowly, "you've got me wrong, Autumn. I'm not saying anything about what I would do if I could. But—not against your will, my dear. I admit I was glad when Lin found she couldn't come out. I was glad of this chance of being alone with you. I was silly enough to think that perhaps—alone with me for the last time—you might relent a little."

"I'm sorry, Florian," she said wearily. "I have tried to make it clear from the first that we could never be more than friends."

"You have your reasons for that, no doubt," he said. "Am I so—so absolutely impossible?"

Autumn sighed and turned her eyes to the window. "I seem to have made a mess of things, all around," she said.

THE PROBLEM OF FORGIVENESS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 18:21-35.
GOLDEN TEXT—And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.—Matthew 6:12.

Christianity and forgiveness belong together. Among the religions of the earth Christianity stands out as the one true faith because it properly and adequately meets the problem of sin. In Christ is provided forgiveness for sin, cleansing from all unrighteousness, a new birth by which one enters into a life of holiness and power.

Since these things are true it would seem to be almost unnecessary to urge God's children to be of a forgiving spirit. But as Bishop Ryle says, "It is a melancholy fact that there are few Christian duties so little practiced as that of forgiveness. It is sad to see how much bitterness, unmercifulness, spite, harshness and unkindness there is among men." Surely these things ought not so to be.

I. The Extent of Forgiveness (vv. 21, 22).

"How long do I have to stand it?" is the question of the human heart untouched by the spirit of Christ. The injustices of life, the offenses of our fellow men against us, all seem to pile up until the burden is about to crush us. What is the answer to man's cry?

The Jews had an answer. Three times is enough. Forgive once, yes. Again, yes. But the third time, no. Peter was big-hearted enough to more than double that allowance of mercy. He was willing to forgive not just two or three times, but seven times. The point to be kept in mind, however, is that whether forgiveness means three times or seven times, if there is a limit, it is a matter of reckoning, of keeping books, and of ultimately bringing down our judgment upon the heads of the offenders.

The spirit of Christ swept all of that aside. He said that one should forgive 70 times seven. In other words, Christian forgiveness is to be untiring, unlimited, to know no weariness and have no boundaries. If one really forgives it is because he has a forgiving spirit and that spirit is not exhausted by use, but rather grows by exercise.

A word of caution is in order at this point. Let no one suppose that our Lord's instruction means that offenses against the law of the land or against the good order of society are to be overlooked and condoned. It relates to the cultivation of a personal spirit of forgiveness, the laying aside of revenge, of malice, of retaliation which do not become the Christian.

II. The Motive of Forgiveness (vv. 23-34).

Two motives are given in our text, the first being that since we ourselves are daily and hourly in need of forgiveness at the merciful hand of God, we should in turn be merciful toward those who sin against us. Compared with our offenses against the law of God, we know that the misdeeds of our neighbors against us are mere trifles. Remember what God has done for you, and then when you are tempted to be hard and ungracious with your brother, remember the mercy of God.

The second motive is the remembrance that a day of judgment is to come. There is always a time of reckoning ahead even as was the case with these servants. Remember not only what God has done for you and is doing for you, but what you must yet expect Him to do in that day of judgment.

III. The Importance of Forgiveness (v. 35).

A man dealing with his fellow man is apt to think that it is merely a matter between man and man. We are not dealing with a straight line between ourselves and our brother (that was Peter's error), but with a triangle at whose apex is God Himself. If I expect God to forgive me, I must let that same forgiveness flow out to my brother. If I deal with him as though God had nothing to do with the matter, then I must not try to count God's forgiveness into the picture when I stand indebted before Him.

Here again we express a word of caution. Let no one suppose that our redemption in Christ is contingent upon what we do toward our brethren. "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God; not of works, lest any man should boast" (Eph. 2:8, 9). Nor does the truth of our lesson mean that we are somehow going to bargain with God, trading a bit of our forgiveness toward others for His forgiveness of us. God is not interested in such transactions. But it does mean that if you cannot or will not forgive, you may well consider whether you are a Christian at all.

Angry Words

Seest thou a man that is hasty in his words? There is more hope of a fool than of him.—Proverbs 29, 20.

Youthful Tailored Two-Piece Frock

SEASON in and season out, the whole year round, you need a two-piece tailored suit-frock like 1875-B. It's ideal for business, classroom wear and general spectator sports. The collarless neckline, besides being very smart, gives you a chance to indulge your fancy for sports jewelry and scarfs.

The skirt is full and circular, and of course you can wear it with your lingerie blouses, too. The jacket-blouse has unusually attractive bodice detailing, with stitched seams emphasized by two little flat pockets, placed just where slim figures need them! It is fitted in to hug the waistline, and the shoulders are gallantly squared, to make it look even more slender. Tweed, velveteen, flannel and wool crepe are excellent materials for right now; by all means repeat this later in faille or flat crepe.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1875-B is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding bust measurements 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 14 (32) requires 4½ yards of 39-inch material. With long sleeves, size 14 requires 4¾ yards of 39-inch fabric.

For a pattern of this attractive model send 15 cents in coins, your name, address, style, number and size to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1324, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Grunst, Sr., celebrated the 40th wedding anniversary at their new home on Saturday evening, January 6. There were 30 relatives and friends present who showered the honored couple with many beautiful gifts. Luncheon and refreshments were served at mid-night. A mock wedding was performed by Mr. A. Grunst, the youngest son of two boys. The bride wore a veil and carried a cauliflower bouquet garnished with celery and radishes. The groom also had a bouquet of celery and radishes. They all had a very enjoyable evening in dancing and playing games. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. J. Harcourt, Mrs. J. Vlasaty, and Mrs. C. Blizard.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Ellsworth, Chicago, were dinner guests Sunday at the Albert Felten home.

Mr. and Mrs. Hanish and son, Chicago, were guests of Rev. and Mrs. Weinreich Sunday. Rev. Weinreich's mother, also of Chicago, visited him on the same day.

Rev. and Mrs. Weinreich spent Tuesday at Lake Bluff, Illinois.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. William Schult, a daughter, last Thursday in the St. Francis hospital, Blue Island.

LEGION AUXILIARY NOTES

The oyster supper at the Orland Convalescent Center was given Sunday evening, December 24, with our rehabilitation chairman, Myrtle Wolf in charge.

Table decorations were highly original and beautiful. Novel little favors were the handiwork of Mr. and Mrs. Wolf.

Gifts were presented to the men from the Department, the District, and our Unit.

Francis Rowden, hospital chairman; Margaret West, Trudie Swisher, Marie Hagedorn, Mamie Braudau, and Minnie Felten assisted our chairman in serving.

The men assured us that they were very appreciative of this delightful supper, and it made us happy to be able to assist in bringing a little happiness and cheer to them on Christmas Eve.

Much credit is due to our chairman for the arrangement of this lovely supper.

Our Child Welfare chairman, Ruth Freitag, and our Community Service chairman, Francis Rowden, and their committees delivered ten baskets of groceries to the needy families in our community.

Personal gifts were distributed to seven children of deceased veterans and members of our Unit.

Gifts were also presented to children from the Daily Times.

Remember to attend our next business meeting Friday evening, Jan. 12, at the home of Amanda Braudau.

TINLEY PARK WOMAN'S CLUB CALENDAR

Jan. 11. Music department, Mrs. M. J. Rensink, chairman. Mrs. Anna Hirsch, hostess.

Jan. 12. (American Home department, Mrs. Chas. Wallen, chairman. Mrs. F. H. Baldwin, hostess.

Jan. 15. An affiliated meeting, the Third District. Hostess club is Morgan Park. We are requested to arrive at 9:30 p. m. Leave here at 9:00 o'clock, or train that is available.

Jan. 16. Garden department, Mrs. F. H. Baldwin, chairman. Mrs. M. Hargrave, hostess.

Mrs. R. C. Hannun, press and publicity chairman, attended a meeting of her department January 4, at club headquarters. Mrs. George A. Harriman, state chairman, conducted the meeting. The principle speaker was the manager of the Christian Science Monitor. The gentleman said in part that the reading public today is looking for facts more than ever before, that a higher standard of journalism is necessitated, is demanded. Many editors have lead in this establishment of a want for facts. He said, "thinking people want the whole story for it helps them in the investigation of reading material that the whole truth may be garnered by them."

"More of us are mentally alert for truth. Many are in a non-partisan mood at present."

The Executive Board of the Woman's club took advantage of an invitation to the Blue Island club on January 9, at 1:15 p. m. Mesdames Baldwin, Boeyer, Campbell, Ebenback, Hannun, Kester, Nielsen, Mesenbrink, A. Stover, and Wallin were in attendance.

The music department presented Miss Lillian Heitman, who presented a splendid paper on American Indian music. Miss Heitman was assisted in the presentation by Miss Loretta Homeyer on the piano and Miss Muriel Engelland, soprano. Miss Homeyer and Miss Engelland are accomplished and talented artists, and both home town young women.

We were then entertained by a highly professionalized guest artist, introduced by the Blue Island program chairman, Mrs. Arthur Johler. A dramatic reading of Hart and Kaufman's comedy "The Man Who Came To Dinner." A comedy, of course, is built upon a series of humorous situations very much emphasized and to enjoy it the listeners must departmentalize the mind and place the piece in its department, to document it in its characteristic pigeon-hole. This is to be sure a very sophisticated production.

The club meeting was presided over by Mrs. W. T. Ewing, president of the Blue Island club. The social hour was charmingly conducted by the hostess for the day, Tea and coffee and accompanying dainties were served.

The regular meeting of the Tinley P. T. A. was held January 5.

A piano selection was given by Dorothy Sleuter, an eighth grade pupil in Mr. Clinebell's room.

The guest speaker was Mr. Hart, who is on the staff of Northwestern. His subject was "Modern Methods in Child Guidance."

Mrs. Robinson's room presented the school program and also won the room award.

The regular business meeting took place. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Cushman and Mrs. Zimmerman.

The chief interest for the month will be a card and bunco party to be held in the school auditorium Wednesday, January 31, at 8 p. m. A small admission will be charged and a very valuable door prize is offered.

The Ladies Aid of St. Paul's Lutheran church of Tinley Park is giving a three-act play "His Women Folks" at the Matteson Public school auditorium on Thursday, January 18, at 8 p. m. Music will be furnished by Rogers Orchestra.

sent Mr. Schreiber a bouquet in honor of the event. Mr. Schreiber is the oldest business man in Tinley Park today. He has conducted a shoe shop here for many years and is known far and wide and has a very large circle of friends who extend hearty wishes to him and hope he will be privileged to enjoy many more such happy occasions. Mr. Schreiber does not show a trace of his age, is very spry and walks with a quick gait. He is vitally interested in world affairs as well as those of this community. He has never been seriously ill and has a keen and retentive memory. He has held local offices and has been quite active in the business life of the community.

He was born in Germany and came to this country as a young man. First he located in Pottstown, Pa., and shortly thereafter located in Bremen township, first in Gosselsville, then in Tinley Park, where he has since resided.

Following the laying of the corner stone at the new Tinley Park Methodist church Sunday afternoon, Rev. and Mrs. L. E. Weinreich served tea to a number of friends and relatives at the parsonage.

Mrs. J. C. Funk is on the sick list.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Funk, Mrs. George Hartman and Wilbur Funk left Wednesday on an auto trip to Florida. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Koehler left for Florida on Tuesday for a several weeks stay.

The annual stockholders meeting of the Bremen State bank will be held next Thursday evening in the banking room.

The directors of the Bremen State bank held their monthly meeting last Thursday night and adopted a new set of by-laws.

The state highway trucks have been out every day this week keeping the highways free from snow and placing cinders on slippery spots.

The annual meeting of the voting members of the Zion Lutheran church will be held January 17.

The Tinley Park Board of Education held their monthly meeting in the school Monday night.

The Tinley Park Village Board held a special meeting Wednesday night to consider several matters pertaining to building permits and tiling.

The Tinley Park hunters who shot two deer in Canada on a hunting trip last fall, had the heads of their trophies mounted and they now adorn the walls of Dini's tavern. One of the deer was shot by Mr. Dini, the other by H. F. Brueggeman.

Edw. Jagla is making plans for a series of pinocchio parties. Watch for announcement of dates.

James English has been on a trip to Wellman, Illinois.

Mrs. Martin Miller is busy these days looking after her nursery stock business. She has a good sized order of nursery stock ordered and is ready to fill orders.

The sewing club met and sewed at the home of Mrs. James Keleher Monday night. A delicious lunch was served.

The Smiling Thru bunco club met and played at the home of Mrs. Charles Crist Thursday afternoon.

Grandma Hick celebrated her birthday with her daughters and sons Thursday. Several friends dropped in on Friday that couldn't be there Thursday. But as the old saying goes "Better late than never." Her host of friends wish her many more happy birthdays.

Motor Club Issues January Safety Posters

Clutching a smaller boy's shoulder to keep him from stepping out in front of the speeding car, the Swiss boy pictured above in the Chicago Motor club January safety poster, gives this advice, "Keep From Between Parked Cars, Danger Lies Just Beyond."

The poster distributed by the club to 35,000 classrooms in Illinois and Indiana is done in delicate yellows, red and black and the scene is typical of Switzerland with the Alps towering in the background, Swiss architecture shown across the thoroughfare, and the three children dressed in their native costumes. The lesson which is illustrated never dodge into the street between parked cars . . . is one of vital importance to school children and adults as well, and is studied at length in connection with the posters in each school.

In conjunction with the posters, which are a part of the "Safety 'Round the World Series," each classroom receives lesson sheets from the motor club which are adapted to all age groups. These are discussed and the problems are worked under each teacher's supervision. Comments from teachers throughout the two states indicate that pupils are absorbing the safety advice given on the posters each month in addition to looking forward to the safety lessons as a sort of a game.

"The boys in my room enjoy the motor club safety lessons just as much as manual training, and the girls are as interested in learning about good pedestrian habits as they are in cooking class," one teacher wrote the motor club.

Law On the FarmDRILLING WELLS

Previous to the drilling of any water well in the State a permit must be obtained from the State Department of Mines and Minerals, in accordance with a new law. As applies to water wells this statute requires that: "It shall be the duty of any person, firm or corporation, having the custody or control of any well drilled for . . . water . . . and of the owner or owners of the land . . . to file in the office of the Department of Mines and Minerals a statement and map giving the location of each well to be drilled . . . with reference to section corners and lines, or other land marks . . . Evidence of having filed such statement and map shall be given to the person, firm, or corporation filing them, by the Department of Mines and Minerals, and shall constitute authority for drilling."

The purpose of the requirement of a permit to drill is to provide that an adequate log and accurate location of the well may be furnished the Geological Survey and that sample cuttings of drilling may be obtained where desired. In view of some distinctive characteristics of water wells in contrast to oil and gas wells, the Department of Mines and Minerals has issued special instructions with regards to water wells.

Whoever is responsible for providing an accurate log, location, and sample cuttings, whether owner, engineer, or drilling contractor, may apply for the permit to drill, but only one person need apply.

Since dug wells, wells bored with soil augers, and sand point wells are generally quite shallow and end at the top of the first water-bearing bed in the glacial drift, the logs of such wells are not desired and permits are therefore not required for these types of wells. Permits are required, however, for drilled wells.

Drilling should be anticipated far enough in advance to receive the permit before drilling begins. In case any well for which permit is issued is not to be drilled, the permit may be cancelled. It is recognized that it is sometimes desirable or imperative to begin drill of a water well as soon as contracted. Such drilling may be begun as soon as the proper application for a permit is forwarded to the Department of Mines and Minerals provided, however, that sample cuttings will be saved at 5-ft. intervals from the top of the bed rock below the glacial drift to bottom of the hole so as to comply with any possible regulations for such sampling.

A companion statute to the one described above is "an act to require the reporting of information essential for the sealing of wells to prevent escape of oil, gas, salt or fresh water, or other materials from one stratum to another through such wells."

As especially applicable to water wells, this law states:

"Par. 1. It is the duty of any person, firm, or corporation having custody or control of any well drilled for gas, oil or water, to file a log of said well in the office of the State Geological Survey Division of the Department of Registration and Education, Urbana, within thirty (30) days after completion of said well."

"Such log: (1) shall show the character and depth of the formations passed through or encountered in the drilling of any such well, particularly showing the depth and thickness of water-bearing strata."

"(2) Shall indicate . . . capacity . . ."

"(3) Shall give the location of the hole in accordance with the description required by the Department of Mines and Minerals in the application to said Department for permit to drill any such well."

"It shall be the duty of the Department of Mines and Minerals to supply to the Geological Survey a duplicate copy of each such permit to drill, showing the location of the well for which the permit is issued in accordance with the requirements for description necessary in the application for such permit."

In compliance with this law the State Geological Survey announces that sample cuttings will generally not be required from water wells likely to be less than 200 feet in depth. In some localities where detailed information on the subsurface geology above 200 feet depth is needed, samples will be requested from wells likely to be less than 200 feet deep. Since practically all water wells are drilled with churn drills, samples will be requested at 5-ft. intervals. The Geological Survey, located at Urbana, will furnish sample sacks and log books without charge. Blank application forms will be provided by the Department upon request.

Many interesting editorials have been printed on safe driving. I enjoy immensely the fine instructive comments so many editors make on the necessity of safe driving, and I appreciate their contribution to the cause of safety.

Recently, the editor of the Isanti News, Isanti Minnesota, wrote the following:

"Upon returning from an automobile trip, the other evening, we sat down at the typewriter in a veritable frenzy. Foam dripping out of the corners of our mouth, we pounded out the following lines of despair with clenched fists:

"Oh, that some wise jury Would see fit to indict Every nocturnal driver Who won't dim his lights."

Very appropriate; very timely. Let us set the example by dimming our lights, eventually some of these "dumb clucks" will realize that that is the courteous thing to do.

No doubt about it . . . your home has a chronic case of

INADEQUATE WIRING AND OUTLET STARVATION!

Better take advantage of today's low prices and terms on wiring and outlets

HERE ARE THE SYMPTOMS:

DIM LIGHTS—If your lights fade when you attach an iron or some other electric aid, or if the iron takes too long to heat—that's a sure sign that your present wiring is inadequate.

BLACKOUTS—In many cases such overloading of the circuit results in a complete blackout of all lights and appliances. Then a new fuse must be installed, but the same thing may happen again.

CORD NESTS—A sure symptom of insufficient outlets. Caused by trying to plug in lamps, radio, iron and electric train all on one outlet. Very inconvenient—and unnecessary.

... AND HERE IS THE CURE!

See your wiring contractor or Public Service Company representative—ask about the special low prices and terms that make it easy to have modern, adequate wiring and additional electric outlets in your home.

WHY gamble! Why try to get along on wiring that's out of date and fails to deliver enough electricity for your needs? It's not only inconvenient, but costly, too. For when you draw too much current from one circuit at one time, you lose power along the wire—and fail to get all the electricity you pay for. . . . Your friendly electrical contractor has an easy remedy for just such a condition. See him—ask about installing one or two appliance circuits to an adequate number of electric wall outlets. It's not an elaborate task—and the cost is now amazingly low!

... AND ELECTRICITY IS CHEAP!

FRANKFORT

Mrs. Herbert Kohlhaagen

Miss Marjorie Hasenjager gave a miscellaneous shower in her home on Friday, January 5, in honor of Miss Miriam Ostrem, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Ostrom, Joliet, who will become the bride of Clinton Hasenjager on January 14 in Willow ave. Presbyterian church, Joliet. The home was decorated in blue and white, the bride's chosen colors. A chair, beautifully decorated, with an umbrella covering the gifts, served as a pretty setting for the bride-to-be as she received her lovely gifts. The guests enjoyed a delicious luncheon. Many parties have been planned in honor of the couple this week.

On Sunday, January 7, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Lenhardt, formerly of Frankfort, but now residing in Chicago Heights, entertained in their home in honor of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. The invited guests were the members who constituted the bridal party, Mr. Geo. Knapp, Sr., Mr. Alvin Harnack, and Mrs. Herbert Kohlhaagen. Mrs. Clark Baker was not able to be present because she is in Florida. The couple renewed their marriage vows with George Knapp, Jr., of Eden Seminary officiating. Mr. Knapp came from St. Louis to be present. A very impressive and inspiring home service was enjoyed. Others who were present were Mr. Herbert Kohlhaagen and Annette, Mrs. Geo. Knapp, Mrs. Alvin Harnack, and Lola Harnack.

Sunday guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Harnack were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wieland, Marcelle and Kenneth, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Rehberg and Betty, Mr. and Mrs. George Bettenhausen and Lloyd, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Bettenhausen, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Steinhausen and Irene.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Mueller had their son baptized in the Lutheran church in Joliet recently. The name given was Marvin Howard.

During the past week the fire department was very busy answering calls, but luckily, in two instances, the damage was small. The shack on the ice pond burned. A chicken house including chickens on the Anderson place in Lincoln Estates burned. The fire in the meadow of the Wm. Klier farm caused excitement because of the danger to nearby buildings.

Miss Florence Hollstein, a superintendent of Silver Cross hospital, is convalescing at the home of her sister, Mrs. Henry Heisner.

Mr. Fred Klepper returned to his home on Saturday from Silver Cross hospital. His condition is very much improved.

Mr. Wm. Logan is still very ill at his home.

Irvin Block, aged 35, died January 7 in Silver Cross hospital after a short illness. He was born in Frankfort and lived here all of his life. He was a graduate of Frankfort Public School, and was confirmed in St. Peter's Evang. and Ref. church. He was employed as distributing agent by the Standard Oil Co. He is mourned by his mother, Mrs. Louise Block, and his sister Mrs. Bartel Heisner is ill in her home.

The Martha Sewing Circle of the St. Peter's church was entertained last week in the home of Mrs. Albert Minger. The members sewed a quilt.

The recent organization of sports were resumed on Monday, January 8, in the new gym, after a holiday vacation. Volley ball was enjoyed by the members.

MOKENA
SCHOOL NEWS

PRIMARY ROOM

John Skeese, first grade, is in Silver Cross hospital with pneumonia. Kenneth Gee, also of first grade, has been sick for a month at his home. We are glad to have Bruce Gaddis back to school.

In the primary room the attendance for December was 95.18 per cent, with eight tardy.

INTERMEDIATE ROOM

A border across the front of the Intermediate room was made by the fifth grade. This border is a winter scene of snowmen, children coasting, and skating.

Friday afternoon each child brought one favorite toy to school. After recess these were all put on display.

96.25 per cent of the enrollment were here last month, and no tardy cases.

JUNIOR HIGH ROOM

These are some of the better impulses of the Junior High room for 1940:

Mrs. Cappel resolves to improve every day in every way.

Virginia Nebecker resolves to speak no southern slang.

Gordon Spiess resolves to be a good boy in school.

William Bruns resolves to be a good boy and get his lessons.

Jean Rueckert resolves to go home for dinner every day.

Jean Shevlin resolves to be good in school and not to lose her temper.

This tragedy has come to our attention: William Bruns wanted a pair of hockey skates, but Santa Claus didn't get the letter in time or else it got lost on the way to the north pole.

The December attendance was 98 per cent, with no one tardy.

HIGH SCHOOL ROOM

When asked what their New Year's resolutions were, these people were not bashful in answering. Chester Gorney and Edward Tierney resolve to be better boys.

Dean Rueckert is going to save a third of his allowance each week. We doubt it.

Betty Marti isn't planning on going to Florida this year. She says it is lack of funds.

Lucille Janssen and Betty Stark say they aren't going to make any more air castles. This is leap year, you know.

La Verne Gunhouse is going to clean out the library. I believe she means the school's.

No one believed Earl Schoeneck when he promised not to tell a lie.

Charles Burkhardt is going to try to practice his band lessons more often and watch the girls too.

Ruth Lowe believes she can practice her music lessons more often.

Catherine Reid resolves not to lose her temper so often this coming year. We all know she keeps her resolutions.

Eleanor Hostert resolves not to read so many Shakespeare's volumes; she believes she is quoting him too often.

In the High school room attendance was 95.18 per cent in December, with six tardy cases.

Reporters for this week were Eleanor Hostert, Walter Spiess, Arthur Hurley, and Russell Bennet. Serving as editor was Betty Marti.

LINCOLN ESTATES

Misses Mildred and Margaret Weiler, Chicago, spent the week-end with their sister, Mrs. Barney Welter.

Mr. Fred Blodgett, who has been ill, is very much improved.

George Konow is also on the sick list.

Mrs. Charles Ulrich is ill with the flu.

Mrs. Earl Homering has also been numbered with those sick.

Mrs. Margaret Henningsen has returned to her home in Peoria after spending several days with her sister-in-law, Mrs. N. L. Welter.

Francis Ott, who has been ill for the past three weeks, resumed her duties at school this week.

The Woman's club will meet in the home of Mrs. Harry Parker on Wednesday afternoon. Miss Myra Reed will be the assisting hostess.

Mrs. Bertha Loucks has sold her farm to Mr. and Mrs. Ray Meyers.

The parents of the Goodings Grove school held their monthly P. T. A. meeting Friday night. Moving pictures on health were shown and games were played. The committee in charge of the February meeting is Mrs. Petrulirs, Mr. Henry Holm and Peter Smith, Sr. All parents in the district are invited.

The Royal Neighbors will hold their buncos and pinochle party on Friday afternoon, January 19, instead of the 18th as formerly announced.

Angelo Depra, director of plays for the Dramatic club has selected a play "Fixin' Aunt Fanny," a comedy in three acts, and practice was started Friday night at the home of the director.

Mrs. Walter Mohr, who underwent a major operation at the St. Joseph hospital last week, was expected to return home Saturday.

A group of 36 young people surprised Miss Betty Hartman Wednesday night in honor of her birthday. Games were enjoyed and refreshments served.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kopleman and family, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beaver, Mr. and Mrs. Angelo Depra were entertained in the Hostert brothers home in Orland township Sunday evening.

Mrs. Charles Jensen has been ill with quinsy.

Mrs. John West is also a victim of quinsy.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Corey, Earlville, were business visitors in Homer Saturday.

Joseph Dean McClintock, aged 45, passed away Friday night at his home after a lingering illness. He leaves to mourn his loss a wife, Mildred; three sons, Eugene, Merle, and Robert; a daughter, Miss Verna; his mother, Mrs. Alice McClintock, Joliet; two brothers, John and George. The body was removed to the Sonntag funeral home in Joliet from where funeral services were held Monday afternoon, with Rev. George Olson officiating. Burial was at the Woodlawn cemetery.

Scout Council Re-elects Officers

The Potawatomi Trails Council of the Boy Scouts of America held their annual business meeting and election of officers Monday night at the Jones Memorial Center, in Chicago Heights.

The various chairman of committees made interesting and important reports.

The Potawatomi Council has had a splendid growth as shown by the following figures:

	12-31-38	12-31-39
Troops	35	42
Scouts	775	936
Ships	0	3
Sea Scouts	3	28
Packs	10	12
Cubs	253	307
New Scouts during year		453
New Cubs during year		148

The Potawatomi Trails Council takes in the following townships: Orland, Bremen, Thornton, Frankfort, Rich, Bloom, Green Garden, Monee, Crete, Peotone, Will and Washington.

The keynote of the business session was the urgent need for more man power to fill the offices of leaders and other important posts in order to make Scouting function better. Another point brought out was the need of more publicity in order to sell the idea of Scouting to the general public. It was shown that the Girl Scouts have capitalized on this idea and through publicity have sold the public on the idea of Girl Scout programs and activities. (Another important point brought out was to inaugurate a drive to enlist the interest of Scouts of 5 and 10 years ago to take an active part again in the promotion of Scouting activities.)

The same officers of the Council were all re-elected. A dinner was held in connection with the Council meeting.

The following towns interested in the Scout movement were represented: Chicago Heights, Harvey, Thornton, Dolton, Riverdale, Forest Ridge, Midlothian, Matteson, Steger, Homewood, Glenwood, Crete, and Mokena. The latter was represented by Mayor Harry F. Mall, Elmer Cooper, Stokes Nebeker, William Semmler, James Egerton and Lawrence Kohl. From present indications a concerted drive will be made during 1940 to enroll more boys in the Scout organization and also arouse public interest in the Scout movement.

Still Time to See the Big Shrine Circus

If you still hope to see the "biggest show on earth," the Shrine Winter Circus, you'll have to hurry because this spectacular 64-act circus comes to a close Sunday night, January 14, in the International Amphitheater at Halsted and 42nd Streets.

Meanwhile, there are afternoon and evening performances in and above the three rings of the amphitheatre daily through Sunday. The widely heralded acts are more than coming up to advance billing and thrilling the crowds, which have already passed the 200,000 mark for a new high record in Chicago circus annals.

If ever a circus "had everything" this is it. Most hazardous are the specialties of Capt. Roman Proke, who handles a cage of snarling Bengal tigers in the iron-barred cage without the aid of a gun or chair, and the high wire stunts of the Great Wallendas, seven in number.

Then, too, there are such uncanny feats of skill as those of the Loyal Repensky's in acrobatic horsemanship, Diane Lovett and her herd of performing elephants, Rudy R. horses, Roland Hibler and his seals, Don Francisco on the slack wire, the Eight Flying Thrillers on trapezes, the Voise troupe of aerial acrobats, and the Six Antaleks in "perch" stunts.

Famous fun-makers are in evidence with their antics, including Otto Griebing, Shorty Flemm, Emmett Kelly, Mickey McDonald, Paul Jung, Harry and Loretta LaPearl, and others.

Lee Powell heads the wild west after-show, in which Baron Nowak, the world's tiniest man, also appears.

Girl Scout News

DO YOU KNOW OTTO?

Well, we Girl Scouts didn't 'til last week when we met him at the Shriners Winter Circus where we had the time of our lives through the generosity of the Mokena Civic Ass'n.

Laugh? Well, I'll say we did. He had our goat at first, but before the evening was over we had him. He introduced us to everyone as one big happy family. I guess that wasn't so far fetched, because between watching the bare-back riders and the tight-rope walkers we were pleasantly surprised by some popcorn that Mr. Echeinstein sent down to us and then it was all for one and one for all.

All kidding aside, it was a wonderful circus, and we'll mark it down as a forerunner to many happy gatherings through scouting. We and all we want to thank the Civic association for ending our 1939 with a glorious "bang."

QUICK-FROZEN FOODS A WISE CHOICE
(See Recipes Below)

'Sing a Song of Seasons'

In the not too-distant past, we sang a song of seasons in food—oysters in the "R" months; fresh vegetables in spring and summer; juicy berries in June, July, and August; and tender turkeys in the fall. But the newest method of preserving foods—quick-freezing—means "open season" on most foods at any time of year—fresh berries in January, oysters in June, and choice chicken or turkey whenever you choose!

Quick-frozen foods are harvested at the height of the season, when flavor and quality are at their best; freezing is done so close to the place where the food is harvested, caught, or killed, and the cleaning, cutting or slicing are done so rapidly, that there is no chance for the food to lose its flavor and freshness.

Quick-frozen foods are a good tip for the homemaker who values her leisure and her manicures! All the grubby preparation tasks are done before the freezing, so kitchen duty is practically cut in half! That means that frosted or quick-frozen foods are a wise choice when you're entertaining. By the way, you can use them for most of the recipes in my booklet, "Easy Entertaining." With quick-frozen foods to cut down the work and "Easy Entertaining" to give you menus and recipes that are practical and different, company meals are a simple matter!

Cream Gravy.

Drain all but about 1/4 cup of fat from the frying pan. Add 1/4 cup flour and blend well. Gradually stir in 1 1/2 cups of rich milk (or half milk and half cream). Cook over low flame, stirring constantly, until the gravy thickens. Season with salt and pepper, if desired.

Asparagus With Lemon Butter Sauce.

1 package quick-frozen asparagus
1/4 cup butter
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Cook quick-frozen asparagus in boiling water, as directed on the package. Drain. Cream butter and add lemon juice gradually. Pour over the hot asparagus and serve at once.

Red Raspberry Shortcake.

(Serves 4)
1 box (10 ounces) quick-frozen red raspberries (thawed)
1/2 cup sugar
4 tablespoons water
4 hot shortcake biscuits, split and buttered
1/4 cup cream (whipped)
Mix raspberries with 1/2 cup sugar and 4 tablespoons water and crush slightly. Let stand 1/2 hour, stirring occasionally. Spread raspberries on lower halves of hot shortcake biscuits; top with upper halves and additional berries. Garnish with whipped cream.

French Fried Shrimp.

(Serves 4-5)
1 package quick-frozen cooked and cleaned shrimp
Seasoned crumbs
1 egg
1 tablespoon water
Thaw the shrimp as directed. Dip in the seasoned crumbs, then in the egg beaten with the water and back in the crumbs. Fry in deep fat (380 degrees) for 2 to 3 minutes, or until the shrimp are well browned. Serve hot with tartar sauce.

Deep Dish Blueberry Pies.

(Serves 4-5)
1 package quick-frozen blueberries
1/4 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon butter
Plain pastry
Combine berries (if it is not necessary to thaw them first), sugar, salt, and butter. Place in individual baking dishes (with no under crust). Cut rounds of pastry, slightly larger than the tops of the baking dishes. Place a round of pastry on each baking dish, and pinch the pastry to the edge of the dish. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees) for 10 minutes; then reduce the heat (350 degrees) and bake about 25 minutes longer.

Shortcake Biscuits.

(Makes 4 large biscuits.)
1 cup flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons sugar
2 1/2 tablespoons butter
3/4 cup milk

Sift dry ingredients together. Cut in the butter and add milk gradually. Turn onto floured board and knead gently for about 5 seconds. Pat out, and cut into 4 large rounds. Brush with melted butter. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees) for about 20 minutes. While the biscuits are still warm, split, and spread with softened butter.

New-Fashioned Fried Chicken With Cream Gravy.

Thaw one quick-frozen chicken enough to separate; cut into pieces for serving. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and roll in flour. Melt fat in a heavy skillet, having the fat 1/4 to 1/2 inch deep. Brown the chicken in this, turning frequently. Reduce the heat slightly and fry for about 25 minutes longer, turning frequently. Remove chicken to a hot platter.

It's fun to give parties when you've a copy of "Easy Entertaining" to guide you in every step—from planning your work to serving a delicious meal. Eleanor Howe's cook book, "Easy Entertaining," gives you menus and recipes for parties of every kind—from a Valentine luncheon to a reception for the bride. There are suggestions for children's parties, too—parties for 'teen age groups as well as toddlers. Send 10 cents in coin to "Easy Entertaining," care of Eleanor Howe, 919 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, and add a copy of this helpful booklet to your kitchen library.

'Just Good Food.'

Good food plays such an important part in the health and happiness of the family! In this column next week Eleanor Howe will give you some of her hints on planning and preparing really delicious foods—tricks in making pastry that's tender and flaky; a hint or two on roasting meats to just the proper turn; and suggestions for seasoning soups and sauces.

TIPS FOR HOUSEWIFE

Lamp shades of painted tin combine well with pottery bases.

Before adding sugar to cake mixture always sift through a fine strainer.

For iced coffee you should be a little more generous with your coffee measure.

Mend leaks in gas or water pipes by winding long strips of cloth dipped in hot paraffin.

Left-over sandwiches need not be discarded. Brush with melted butter and saute to a golden brown on each side.

One tablespoon of cooked oatmeal thoroughly beaten into the mixture for pumpkin pie saves one egg and cannot be detected.

Chill plates, dishes and glasses in which cold foods and drinks are to be served. The food and drink will stay cold much longer.

To remove ink from fingers, dip fingers and an unburned sulphur match in water. Rub the match over the ink spot until it vanishes.

When buying canned goods for emergency shelf, immediately write on the label the month, date, year and price. This enables one to use the older things first and so keep your stock fresh.

Honey Bee Is Domesticated To Aid Crops

Russian Farmers Experiment With Special Insect 'Diets.'

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

Putting the honey bee to work on the farm like other domesticated live stock is a new development in Russia. It has been learned that bees can increase the yield of a crop by carrying pollen from one flower to another on their day-long honey hunt. Singling out a crop which does not ordinarily tempt bee appetites. Soviet scientists extracted syrup from the flowers and fed it to the insects. As a result, the bees, addicted to their new diet, now seek it in the fields, and reports from the U. S. S. R. hint of crop increases.

The honey bee chooses flowers more carefully than do humans, for

THIS WORKER BEE is seen gathering honey from goldenrod. It requires about 3,000 visits for a worker bee to gather one drop of liquid from flowers, of which only 30 per cent is honey. Even the 30 per cent is 70 per cent water which has to be evaporated by special "air-conditioned" storage cells.

she refuses to mix her flavors. When she starts sipping from one variety of blossom, she will fly for miles if necessary seeking others of the same variety, so that the honey will be pure. This strict selectiveness of insect diet gives the world some distinctive honey, such as the Greek honey of Mount Hymettus and the American burble flavored with star thistle or purple alfalfa or tulip tree blossoms.

The bee that has acres of blooms which she prefers within easy reach naturally fattens the honeycomb more quickly than the insect with only an area of assorted wild-flowers available. Clover is the principal raw material for the honey-makers in the United States.

California Leads Nation.

California, where the American honey tide rises highest, encourages the bee with fragrant orange and sage blossoms. Michigan and Ohio, however, (the states next in honey production) have miles and miles of clover for their bees to drink. Iowa and New York are also chiefly clover states, but their hives produce such variations as raspberry and buckwheat honey. Texas turns its bees out to feast on cotton blossoms and mesquite, with results that place the state among the half dozen largest honey producers.

BEE MAN of Lake George, N. Y., is Foster A. Lockhart pictured here with both hands covered with the insects. He has lived with bees for 52 years, has been stung about 10,000 times and has shipped his bees to China, New Zealand and every corner of the globe.

The bee is a tidy little European immigrant that has made good in the United States. Her secret formula for making sugar from flowers is ages older than man's way of extracting it from cane or beets. Egyptians are supposed to have domesticated the insect. During Old Testament times the bee was well established in the business of making honey. European settlers, finding no native honeybees in America, brought bee colonists to the New World. Indians marveled ceaselessly at the hard-working "white man's fly."

Bee-Colonizing Industry.

Bee-colonizing now is a larger industry in the United States than in colonial days. A hive of bees in the long winters of the northern states devours about 50 pounds of honey and produces none. Keepers therefore find it less expensive to buy a southern queen to start a new colony in the spring than to feed the old one through the winter. Alabama leads the nation as a bee-employment bureau for northern bee keepers. This year's shipments carried an estimated 70,000 Alabama queens.

The regal coach in which Her Insect Majesty travels is a wire and wood box no larger than a deck of cards. Her royal tour takes place by mail.

In her new hive, she produces eggs at the rate of 1,500 a day. Three weeks elapse between egg and fluffy young bee, too young to fly, but capable of helping out with odd jobs around the hive, such as cleaning the nursery cells or packing the pantries with bee-bread or flower pollen brought in by adults. In 10 days the youngsters work their way down to the portals of the hive, where they join the wing fanners of the air-conditioning brigade or the police squads of doormen. Here they test their wings on brief flights and trial flights of a yard or two.

Tibet Picks Five-Year-Old Boy To Rule as New 'Living Buddha'

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

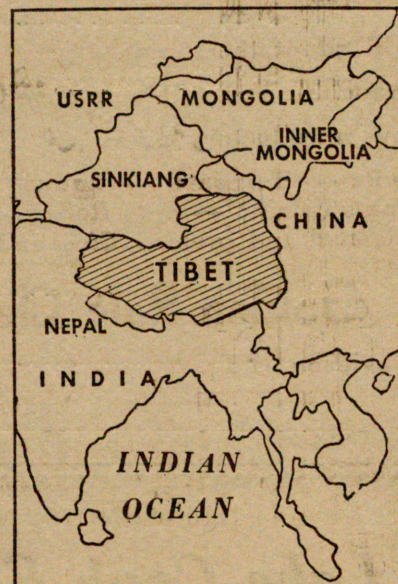

A living "baby" Buddha now accepting homage from the 2,000,000 people he will rule till death, and believed by his followers to have the same soul possessed by the ruler who preceded him, is the subject of a strange story being unfolded in fragmentary news from Tibet.

The small boy in knee-boots and yellow robes, recently installed in Lhasa's hilltop palace, is Tibet's fourteenth Dalai Lama, now identified after more than five years of search for the thirteenth Lama's successor. Until he reaches his majority regents will rule in his name.

Tibet, secluded between the world's highest mountain barriers and the gloomiest windswept desert of Asia, is one of the last theocracies (lands ruled by priests) surviving in the modern world. The Dalai Lama, head of both church and state, is acclaimed as a living embodiment of Buddha. His succession is determined by no commonplace father-and-son hereditary arrangement, but by the principle of reincarnation. When a Dalai Lama dies, oracles go into trances for guidance, and priests search the country for a boy born at the instant of the ruler's death. The spirit of the former Dalai Lama is accepted as having entered the baby, who thereupon becomes ruler of a land one-sixth as large as the United States, and head of a priesthood numbering between one-fifth and one-seventh of the entire population.

Land Above Clouds.

This Himalayan land literally above the clouds, where such mystic

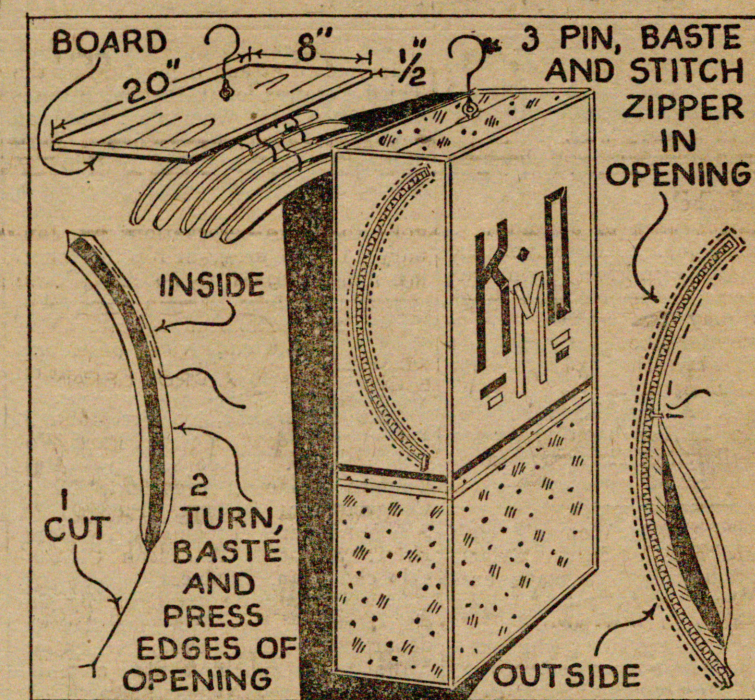

ISOLATED AND MYSTERIOUS Tibet is secluded between the world's highest mountain barriers and the gloomiest windswept desert of Asia. One-sixth as large as the United States, Tibet has long been a goal of the adventure seeker.

cism colors politics, is the highest country in the world. The cold dry Tibetan plateau is a land table of almost a half-million square miles at a level above 13,000 feet, with the loftiest peaks on earth rising above it.

Mountain freshets wash gold into Tibet's valleys, which have supplied China's luxury trade for centuries. What other minerals Tibet holds, more precious than the traditional commerce in musk and yak tails, wool, deer horns, and salt, is as yet only suspected.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Garment bags made from odds and ends.

"DEAR MRS. SPEARS: I thought you might be interested in how I made garment bags for each member of my family, almost entirely from things I had on hand. The foundation part of each was made of 1/2-inch board; a screw-eye; a hook from a hanger; and five small screw hooks underneath. For the bag, I combined muslin flour sacks with odds and ends of figured cottons and trimmed the joinings with bias tape. I followed your directions in SEWING Book 2, for initials of bias tape to mark the bags."

At the upper left is sketched the foundation that this reader used. If a zipper is used for the opening, the 36-inch length is best. If you put it in a curved line, you will have a wider opening. Each step in applying the zipper in this way is shown here.

NOTE: The Sewing Basket in every thrifty household should contain a copy of Mrs. Spears' Sewing Book 2, in which she illustrates the five standard methods of repairing all kinds of fabrics. Thirty-two pages to delight every lover of fine handwork. To get your copy send 10 cents in coin to Mrs. Spears, Drawer 10, Bedford Hills, New York, to cover cost.

Confetti Popcorn

2 quarts pop corn 1/2 cup water
2 cups sugar Vegetable coloring
2 tablespoons butter 1 teaspoon flavoring

Divide pop corn into three equal portions. Combine sugar, butter, water, and coloring; bring to boil and cook until the syrup spins a thread (about 15 minutes). Add the flavoring. Pour over popped corn and stir until kernels are sugar coated and separated. Repeat process three times, using a different color and flavor each time; mix batches.
